

Mr. Jose Miguel Estigarribia Villasanti,

born on March 19, 1982, in Asuncion, Paraguay, has called Europe home for the past two decades. Initially, owing to his Dalmatian heritage, he was awarded a scholarship to study the Croatian language at the University of Philosophy in Zagreb. He furthered his education at the University of Maribor, specialising in international trade economics.

During his tenure in Slovenia, he developed a deep affection for this picturesque country and its warm-hearted inhabitants, firmly establishing his roots in Slovenia. For a decade, he served as the director of the family-owned enterprise, Estigarribia d.o.o. In 2021, in collaboration with former colleagues and close friends, he co-founded the International Cooperation Institute IVEJM. Presently, he is engaged in diverse projects spanning Slovenia, Croatia, and South America.

Jose harbours a genuine enthusiasm for the realm of international commerce and endeavours to enrich the cultural tapestry of society. He staunchly advocates for the significance of cultural convergence, championing the reverence for traditions, and instilling the belief that harmonious coexistence in society, underscored by our shared humanity, holds paramount importance.
